

Mathon Systems Joins Google Enterprise Professional Program to Extend Enterprise Search to Litigation Response and Regulatory Compliance

Los Altos, Calif., – October 23, 2006 – Mathon Systems, a provider of information risk management solutions, today announced it has joined the Google Enterprise Professional program to integrate its flagship information risk management solution, Mathon Integral, with the Google Search Appliance. The integrated solution will extend the power of Google search to enterprise organizations to reduce the risk of litigation, enable the rapid discovery of sensitive files (such as spreadsheets, emails, documents, etc.), prevent the loss of critical information, and reduce the cost of regulatory compliance.

“The Google Enterprise Professional Program will help our customers utilize the full search and indexing power of Google with the rich metadata from Mathon to advance risk management initiatives,” said Angus MacDonald, CEO of Mathon Systems. “Google’s enterprise search products offer the same quality search experiences users get with Google.com. By combining Google enterprise search with Mathon Integral, customers get the power of Google indexing with the absolute certainty Mathon metadata provides-- knowing where, when and how every critical document resides or is changed in the enterprise. The combination of Google and Mathon technologies can significantly reduce the time it takes to respond to litigation, demonstrate regulatory compliance and ensure information security.”

The Google Enterprise Professional program includes developers, consultants and independent software vendors that provide value-added services for Google enterprise products.

“Google is excited to have Mathon Systems as a partner in the Google Enterprise Professional program. We’re looking forward to bringing the power of Google search to information risk management,” said Kevin Smith, program manager for Google Enterprise Professional.
